

Messieurs Henry and Robert Joy,

You will confer a singular Obligation on those of your Countrymen that went as Passengers to Philadelphia in America, from Belfast, last May, by giving the following a Place in your useful Paper.

We think that we would deservedly incur the Censure of the Judicious and Impartial, should we omit thus publickly mentioning, the Conduct of our Captain, Mr. James Malcom, whose every Action was calculated for the Advantage, Convenience and Pleasure of his Passengers. With a Liberality not generally practiced, he distributed a greater Variety of Provisions than was promised; which, with his human Usage, helped much to the rendering the Voyage unhurtful and agreeable.

The Friends of the Passengers, some of whom, by a Diversity of Accidents, may hear no Account for a considerable Time, will, we believe, be glad to know that we all arrived, vigorous and healthy.

From no other Motive than a grateful Acknowledgement of the Captain's kind, social, benevolent and friendly Behaviour, do we whose Names are underwritten desire this to be made public; and, that those of our Friends who design to become Adventurers to this Land of Milk and Honey, may know where to find a Man who is particularly adapted for the Trade in which he is employed.

By exerting every Endeavour, and watching every Opportunity that could render a Voyage healthful, short and pleasant, has he drawn the above Character from us; from which we hope his future Passengers will have no reason to dissent.
